When two people are meant to be together, most people think of mushy daytime soap-opera semantics; not a head on collision. If Laura Canton had known, her world was about to be turned upside down she might have put on a seatbelt. Spending a good part of her youth embroiled in a dysfunctional family, she finds solace in her two favorite young men, Bobby Markaus and Randy Silverhawk. Bobby with his tall, strong, blue-eyed good looks has the scruples and loyalty of any good dog after a bitch in heat. While his roving eye and fiery temper are often the source of Laura's heartache, she often finds reassurance and comfort in her best friend. Randy Silverhawk is strikingly handsome, quiet and unassuming and the one person who has always been her rock. Yet Randy never hesitates to pick up the pieces of the doomed relationship between Bobby and Laura with the intent to scatter them in all directions. This trio forms the rungs that roll as any triangle might; flat on its side. They spend a lifetime enmeshed in drama unmatched by even the steamiest of daytime soaps. Their worlds collide throughout a twenty-year span taking them from average working class to wealthy aristocrats in two worlds separate yet intertwined. From the happiness of finding one's soul mate to brutality and adversity that threatens to destroy the privileged lives they grow accustomed to but the life they build and the love they forge is Unwavering.
